Chef Michele Gilebbi, owner of NANA Piccolo Bistrò in Senigallia, selected the three unique ingredients for our chips, all sourced from Andalusia.

The exclusively Agria potatoes, are traditionally cultivated in the Vega Granadina area and irrigated with the pristine water from the Rio Dúrcal, which originates in the Sierra Nevada, bringing about their unique flavor.

The production is entirely artisanal: the potatoes are harvested, washed, slightly peeled and sliced. Fried at 155°C in pure sunflower oil, according to us the best oil to use, as it is flavorless. The chips are drained, dried, cooled at room temperature and ultimately seasoned with pure sea salt. All the ingredients come from the Valle Del Lecrín area, in the province of Granada.

The packaging machinery is state-of-the-art and guarantees the authentic flavor of the product without adding of preservative gases. Consequently our Patatas Nana have a relatively short shelf life of 5 months.

Considering the trend of the consumption of artificially flavored potato chips, our suggestion is to accompany and enhance Patatas Nana by sprinkling them with a delicate dash of black pepper and a squeeze of fresh lemon or lime juice.

Our Chef's favorite recipe?

Heat Patatas Nana for a few seconds in the oven at 180°C and served with Cantabrian anchovies marinated in vinegar.
